PERFORMANCE

Radio Noise Collective

A radiophonic derive in the city - the radio is no longer a medium, the means of broadcasting a sound material that is foreign to it. It is the source of a new musical meaning, and it is the music itself that it is intended to broadcast, which becomes parasitic.

PARIS 24TH AUGUST @ 19:00
€ DONATION

CONCERT-INSTALLATION

GOO- Grand Orchestre d'Ordinateurs

Each of the musicians uses the computer both as an instrument and as tools for transforming the reality of the concert. An immersive room in which the body disappears amongst redirected moments, guided by our senses.

PLATEFORME
73 Rue des Haies, 75020
Paris France

EXHIBITION

Christina Kubisch

Apo33 presents the work of the German artist Christina Kubisch (born in 1948), who has been exploring the sound potential of the electromagnetic fields generated by our urban and technological environment since the 1970s. The exhibition is organized around the work Cloud ("work in progress" since 2011), offering listening to imperceptible waves to the naked ear and questioning the relationship between the visible and the audible.

Exhibition co-produced with Le Bon Accueil (Rennes), festival Jinterstice (Caen), Apo33 (Nantes).

ELECTROPIXEL #9

Electronic bodies and the abstract morphology of the real

At the heart of the contemporary world and its issues, the question of the body and its development, its improvement, its enhancement through electronics and digital means, poses many questions to both the thinkers, artists and society as a whole. When we imagine "electronic bodies" we immediately think of ideas of the cyborg and the increasing possibilities of evolving the body through technology.

Donna Haraway tells us that "A cyborg is a cybernetic organism, a hybrid of machine and organism, a creature of social reality as well as a creature of fiction. Social reality is lived social relations, our most important political construction, a world-changing fiction."

This would be both a fiction, a social relationship and a way of seeing the living from the perspective of the cybernetic. We believe that there may be other relationships between the body and machine that are not only those of Norbert Wiener's cybernetics, but perhaps something more distant.

We are not all cyborgs in the making, the relationship to the machine is still external: smartphones and laptops are still the tools we use and they are not integrated or connected to our bodies. Whilst, in some cases these links are stronger, such as chips embedded under the skin that send out radio signals to communicate with machines, the future seems uncertain, the approaches multiple and open to varying points of view.

Electropixel Festival is a digital art festival centered around experimental transversal and emergent art practices. Electropixel is aimed towards becoming an international festival that offers a space of exchange, experimentation and development for both artists, programmers, inventors of all stripes using new technologies in their creations.

Supported by CNC-Dicream and the Institut Français
